BACKGROUND

Mayowa Animasahun is a 22-year-old right-footed centre-back from Dundalk, currently playing for his hometown club in the League of Ireland Premier Division. A product of the Irish pathway with youth experience at Glenmuir United, St Kevin's Boys, Bohemians and Dundalk, he has also built senior experience through a loan spell at Dungannon Swifts in Northern Ireland.

After returning to Dundalk, Animasahun has grown into a more established first-team defender. His 2026 season has been particularly notable because Dundalk returned to the Premier Division after promotion, placing him back into a higher-tempo, higher-pressure defensive environment. He has 11 Premier Division appearances, 10 starts, 825 minutes and an average rating of 7.02 this season, which reflects a solid adaptation to top-flight football.

PROFILE OVERVIEW

Animasahun profiles as a physically assertive, duel-heavy centre-back whose strongest value lies in defensive actions, box protection and aerial dominance. His data points towards a defender who is regularly involved in first-contact situations rather than one who simply circulates possession.

His standout numbers are in aerial duels, clearances, blocked shots and defensive contributions. He has won 55 aerial duels from 825 minutes, giving him roughly 6 aerial duels won per 90, while his 64 clearances underline how often he is required to defend his own box and attack direct balls.

There is also set-piece threat in his game. He has taken 12 shots this season, six of them headers, with nine attempts coming from corners. He has yet to score in 2026, but his 1.22 xG shows he is consistently getting into dangerous areas from dead-ball situations.

IN POSSESSION

In possession, Animasahun is functional rather than expansive. His 69.3% pass completion and 29.7% long-ball accuracy suggest a defender whose passing game is still developing, especially when asked to progress play over distance or under pressure.
He is not a high-volume build-up centre-back, but he does show useful qualities when the game becomes more direct. He is comfortable playing safer passes into nearby options and can carry the ball when space opens in front of him, shown by three successful dribbles at a 75% success rate.

His next step in possession is improving disguise, tempo and accuracy when playing into midfield. At Premier Division level, where pressure arrives quicker and passing lanes close faster, that will be important if he is to become more than a defensive specialist.

OFF THE BALL

Off the ball is where Animasahun's game is strongest. He is aggressive in duels, dominant aerially and willing to defend the box repeatedly. His 103 defensive contributions, 19 tackles, 11 interceptions, nine blocked shots and 64 clearances show a centre-back who is heavily involved in the dirty work of defending.

He reads direct play well and is especially useful against teams who look to attack through crosses, second balls and set pieces. His aerial win rate of 64.7% is strong, while his duel success rate of 62.8% shows that he generally holds his own across both ground and aerial contests.

The main area to monitor is discipline and decision-making. He has already picked up four yellow cards this season and committed 17 fouls. That is not unusual for an aggressive defender, but it does suggest he can occasionally be pulled into contact-heavy defending when better body shape or timing would solve the situation earlier.

TECHNICAL

Technically, Animasahun is strongest in defensive technique rather than possession craft. His tackling, blocking, heading and contact balance are clear positives. He times a lot of aerial challenges well and uses his frame effectively to compete against forwards.

His passing is more mixed. He can complete basic circulation and connect with full-backs or midfielders nearby, but the data suggests his longer distribution is inconsistent. A 29.7% long-ball accuracy figure is an area for development, especially if Dundalk want to use him as a more reliable outlet under pressure.

On attacking set pieces, he offers real value. He has produced 12 shots and 1.22 xG from centre-back, with most of those chances coming from corners. The next jump is conversion. He is getting to the right areas; the finishing detail now needs to catch up.

Player	Pass Accuracy	Accurate Long Balls %	Successful Dribbles %	Chances Created	xG	Shots
Mayowa Animasahun	69.30%	29.70%	75.00%	300.00%	122.00%	1200.00%
Sam Todd	82%	47%	71%	5	0.42	5

Andrew Quinn	78%	44%	64%	4	0.33	3
Killian Brouder	74%	38%	59%	2	0.21	2

PHYSICAL

Physically, Animasahun has the profile of a modern League of Ireland centre-back: strong, aerially competitive, hard to move in contact and capable of handling repeated defensive actions. His volume of duels and clearances shows he can survive long spells without possession and still defend with concentration.

He is particularly effective when defending crosses and attacking high balls. His size and timing allow him to dominate in the air, while his recovery numbers suggest he remains engaged after the first action.

His individual value rises when fit because he brings continuity to a back line that has needed it.

PSYCHOLOGICAL

Physically, Animasahun has the profile of a modern League of Ireland centre-back: strong, aerially competitive, hard to move in contact and capable of handling repeated defensive actions. His volume of duels and clearances shows he can survive long spells without possession and still defend with concentration.

He is particularly effective when defending crosses and attacking high balls. His size and timing allow him to dominate in the air, while his recovery numbers suggest he remains engaged after the first action.

The slight concern is availability. He has a muscle injury as of May 2026, with an expected return in a few weeks. Dundalk have also had instability in central defence this season, with reports of multiple centre-back pairings being used due to injuries. That context matters: his individual value rises when fit because he brings continuity to a back line that has needed it.

IMPRESSION OF PLAYER

Animasahun profiles as a high-upside domestic centre-back: strong enough for Premier Division football now, valuable in both boxes, and still young enough to develop into a more complete leader at the back.
