BACKGROUND

Ronan Teahan is a 22-year-old Irish attacking midfielder who completed his first Premier Division season with Dundalk in 2026. A native of Cahersiveen, he began with Iveragh United before progressing through Kerry FC's academy and into their inaugural senior squad in 2023. After more than 100 appearances for Kerry and an FAI Cup semi-final in 2025, Teahan joined Dundalk and quickly established himself in the top flight. He made 30 league appearances, starting 23, and contributed four goals and two assists.

His progression has been impressive. Having adapted to the step up from the First Division, I believe his technical ability, mobility and attacking intelligence now make him a genuine recruitment option for English League One and the Scottish Premiership.

PROFILE OVERVIEW

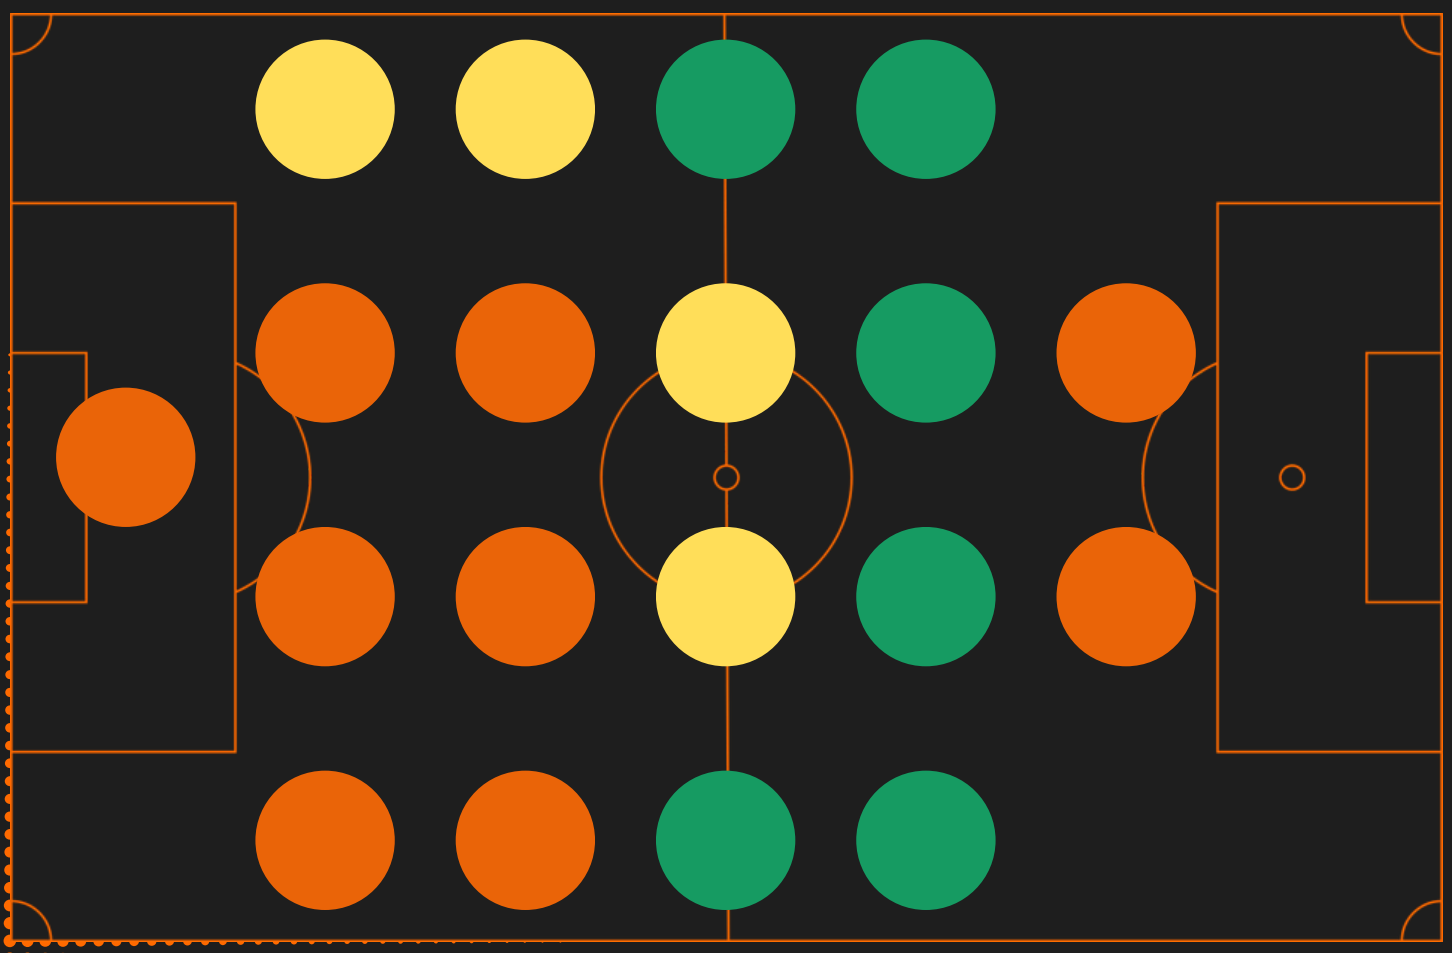

Teahan is a mobile, progressive attacking midfielder whose game is built around carrying possession, finding space and supporting attacks from deeper positions.

He is not a traditional number ten who needs every attack played through him. He is more effective receiving on the half-turn, driving into space or making runs beyond the opposition midfield. His movement allows him to contribute across central and advanced areas without being tied to one position.

His biggest strengths are his directness, technical ability and willingness to progress the ball. His four league goals, including three headers, also demonstrate the value of his movement inside the penalty area.

His final-third decision-making and physical consistency can improve, but his first Premier Division season has reinforced my belief that he is ready to play at a higher level.

POSITION OVERVIEW

Position - Attacking Midfield

Position - Wide Midfield

IN POSSESSION

Teahan is at his best when receiving on the move and carrying possession towards the opposition defence. He has the balance and acceleration to escape the first challenge, while his left foot allows him to turn into space and progress attacks.

His passing is generally tidy, with a 79% completion rate and 77% accuracy in the opposition half. He is more effective combining over shorter distances than attempting ambitious long passes or deliveries from wide areas.

His attacking output improved to four goals and two assists in 2026. Three headed goals are particularly interesting given his height and demonstrate his ability to arrive in dangerous positions.
The main area for improvement remains his final action. He can occasionally carry for too long or miss an earlier pass, but his ability to advance possession makes him an attractive midfield option.

OFF THE BALL

Teahan offers more defensive involvement than many attacking midfielders. He averaged 1.3 tackles, 0.7 interceptions and 3.3 recoveries per game, demonstrating a willingness to contribute when Dundalk were without possession.

He is particularly useful when pressing forward, reacting to loose balls and turning recoveries into attacking opportunities. His pressing contribution against Shamrock Rovers in October, which led directly to a goal, was an excellent example.

He can still improve his positioning and effectiveness in physical contests, particularly when defending deeper areas. However, his mobility, anticipation and work rate would suit a side looking to press aggressively and transition quickly.

TECHNICAL

Teahan's strongest technical quality is his ability to receive possession and move forward in one action. His first touch is generally positive, allowing him to turn away from pressure and carry into advanced areas.

He is comfortable on his left foot and combines effectively with teammates in shorter passing sequences. His 1.1 key passes per game and three big chances created show useful attacking involvement, although he is not yet a consistently prolific creator. His movement in the penalty area is another strength. Scoring three headers during the season demonstrates good timing and anticipation rather than relying on physical dominance. Crossing accuracy remains an area for improvement, while his decision-making after beating the first defender could become more efficient.

Technically, I believe he has the qualities to compete at League One and Scottish Premiership level.

Ronan Teahan	Dundalk	1864	35	1.69
Connor Parsons	Bohemians	1540	24	1.4

Archie Meekison	Sligo Rovers	1789	19	0.96
Ross Tierney	Bohemians	2793	26	0.84

PHYSICAL

Teahan possesses good agility, balance and acceleration over short distances. He can create separation from opponents, carry possession through midfield and cover ground effectively on both sides of the ball.

His physical involvement is an underrated part of his game. Comparisonator ranked him first among 12 Premier Division attacking midfielders for duels contested and won per 90, highlighting his willingness to compete and engage opponents. While his duel success can still improve, he is far from a player who avoids physical contests.

His mobility and intensity should translate well to English League One or the Scottish Premiership. Improving his strength through contact would make him even more effective, but I believe he already possesses the physical qualities required to compete at that level.

PSYCHOLOGICAL

Teahan's career progression suggests a player willing to challenge himself. He developed through Kerry's academy, established himself in senior football and made the move to Dundalk rather than remaining comfortable at First Division level.

His first Premier Division campaign has shown that he can adapt to greater demands. He became a regular starter, contributed important goals and continued to take responsibility in possession. His late equaliser against Sligo Rovers, which secured Dundalk's top-flight survival, was a particularly important contribution.

The next step is to influence matches more consistently and sharpen his decision-making under pressure. His development trajectory is encouraging, although a full assessment of his mentality would require further observation and character references.

IMPRESSION

Ronan Teahan is a progressive, left-footed attacking midfielder whose main strengths are ball carrying, intelligent movement, technical ability and work rate. His first Premier Division season has demonstrated that he can adapt quickly to a higher standard while continuing to develop his attacking output.

I consider Teahan ready for a move to English League One or the Scottish Premiership. In my assessment, he has the ability to compete for a starting position at League One level and contribute immediately in a suitable Scottish Premiership system.

His final-third decision-making and physical strength can improve, but I would recommend him as an immediate first-team recruitment option rather than a long-term development prospect.
